ABSTRACT

Generating contract documents in a recurring contracting environment comprises receiving a contract renewal indication, generating a bid invitation having a plurality of offered terms and a plurality of requested terms in response to the renewal indication, receiving one of more bid responses, and generating a contract by incorporating information from a previous contract and one of the responsive bids. The contract renewal indication may be associated with the expiration of a prior contract, and may comprise instructions from a user to initiate a new contract. In addition, the bids may be scored according to a predetermined scoring standard, one of the responsive bids may be selected from which the new contract is formed, and the highest scoring bidder may be the one selected for the new contract.
